

student nursing organization passion of caring for others

Students interested in joining the nursing program were guided by the Student Nursing Organization on their quest to benefit those in need. SNO introduced members to the concepts of communication and recreational fellowship with their peers through events such as the “Welcome-Back Party” and several other activities. Members were given the chance to connect with others in the nursing program through the organization. Not only did the resolute students learn priceless information about how to help people in their community, but they made sure to have fun and form friendships with their fellow members.

SNO members volunteered for several community service projects throughout the year, and they could be seen at various campus events such as the biannual blood drive and local health fairs. Real life scenarios were presented to members of the Student Nursing Organization that prepared them for the reality of the nursing field. Students in SNO made use of their unwavering passion and devotion for helping people to make progress towards their career goals in the nursing field.

by Madison VanNess

above: Pilot Ken Ford explains the equipment used in an emergency rescue helicopter to ADN students, Roxanne Daley, Briditte Ciocan, Delilah James, and Kyra Phillips.

